I used chrome to build my site for the project. I compared the screenshots taken in Chrome to those taken in both Firefox and Safari. When comparing the index pages I was unable to spot any differences between them. The contact page I noticed several differences mostly centered around the fieldset. In Safari the overall font size of the page seemed to be slightly off when compared to Chrome and Firefox. In the fieldset the label size, orientation, and weight is off. The font weight also seems to be bolded, forum spacing labels and inputs are off, and the submit button background is shifted. When looking at the Firefox screenshots the submit button had the same issues that appeared in the safari browser and the fieldset font weight looks slightly off when compared to Chrome.
